LUKOIL NEFTOHIM BURGAS CELEBRATES THE 60TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BEGINNING OF ITS PRODUCTION OPERATIONS

The history of the Bulgarian oil refining industry began with the production of the first Bulgarian gasoline on September 2, 1963 in the Burgas Neftohim plant.

60 years is a dignified age that speaks of timeless values and traditions, continuity of generations, sustainable development of the enterprise and its team. In the continuous pursuit of technological excellence, the most modern and progressive technologies have always been incorporated in the plant. In the last two decades alone, since the company joined the LUKOIL Group, $3.4 billion has been invested in the refinery's large-scale modernization, and LUKOIL Neftohim Burgas has become one of the leaders in European oil refining.

The reconstruction of existing process units, commissioning of new deep conversion facilities and their integration into the refinery's process scheme resulted in a record increase in the annual oil processing depth from 74 to 97%, production of light products from 64 to 81%, the technological complexity index from 6.5 in 2012 to 14.7 in 2020. The energy intensity index EII according to the SA methodology has decreased from 92 to 86 units. These production records have been achieved with equally impressive achievements in the areas of industrial safety and environmental performance, and here too the company holds an industry-leading position

Building on the experience of generations of oil refiners and petrochemists, the rich technical and intellectual potential, for six decades the company team has been constantly looking for and discovering new opportunities for growth, boldly taking on the most complex projects and successfully implementing them. The expertise and accumulated experience of the company's specialists have established it as a centre for technology transfer, a base for the development and implementation of engineering and technological innovations.
